Yorkshire Geological Society

The Society was founded in 1837, the first of its honorary members being William Smith, the father of English geology. The objects of the Society are to extend the knowledge of the science of geology and to promote and record the results of research, especially that related to the geology of Yorkshire and the neighbouring counties. To further these aims, meetings are held in various parts of the country for the reading and discussion of original contributions to the science, and for the delivery of public lectures. During the summer field meetings are arranged to places of geological interest.

Candidates for admission to the Society must be proposed by two or more members of the Society. Annual Subscription: ordinary members, one pound; student and associate members, five shillings. The subscription for Life Membership is one payment of fifteen pounds, but after fifteen years of ordinary membership the life subscription is nine guineas. Forms of application for membership and other particulars will be furnished on application to the Secretary.

The Library is housed in the Geological Department of the University of Leeds and is open to members during University hours. Books may be borrowed by post on application to the Librarian, the Society paying the cost of postage to the member.

The Proceedings are published periodically (usually twice yearly) in parts at 12/6 each. They are issued free to honorary and ordinary members whose subscriptions are not in arrear. Back numbers are available at the prices listed below (exclusive of postage) from Dr. H. C. Versey, The University, Leeds, 2. When ordering please include a sum estimated to cover postage.
